ABSTRACT

- 5 A user selects base text from a working document for which ruby text is desired. The base text is displayed in a ruby handling window. Despite the ruby handling window being open, the user can change focus to the working document, perform normal operations in the working document, such as
- 10 text editing or may even change the selection of the base text. Such an amendment of the selected base text is then directly updated in the ruby handling window based on the newly selected base text.
